From the town hall to the school to the hospital:

Security Essen shows practical solutions for more security in public spaces

Four concrete scenarios invite experts to inform themselves on the spot

When the international security industry meets at the Security Essen from 25 to 28 September, public security plays a central role. Because the requirements are becoming ever higher. Whether municipal administration buildings, schools or even shops: Those responsible want to protect themselves and their customers in the best possible way, but also discreetly at the same time. The "Public Security Forum" special show with elaborately and realistically designed rooms demonstrates how this works. Experts are invited to visit Messe Essen to find out about practical and innovative solutions.

The special area is located directly in Hall 8 – prominently at the entrance of the Security Essen. Four scenarios from the public space will be designed as showrooms: the administration office of a town hall, the classroom of a school, a hospital and a retail shop. Security solutions from a wide variety of trades show how visitors and employees can be provided with a protected stay. In the town hall scenario, for example, a video-monitored entrance provides control. The data is transmitted to a control centre. Visitors also see the alarm system, which is available to employees in emergencies. Controlled access to the office is via an access control system. A new lock solution protects USB ports from unauthorized access.

Technical solutions from Security Essen exhibitors will be installed in the rooms. Visitors who are interested can thus talk directly to manufacturers at the trade fair. Among others, the companies ONG-IT, Gehrke, Smart Light Solutions, EIZO and Intenta will participate with their products. An open networking area around the Public Security Forum provides space for communication and invites exchange. The marketplace in the middle of the Forum will be the venue for specialist presentations.
